"Seeing is Believing."

And a good lamp must be simple; when it is not simple it is not good. Simple, Beautiful, Good—these words mean much, but to see "The Rochester" will impress the truth more forcibly. All metal, tough and seamless, and made in three pieces only, it is absolutely safe and unbreakable. Like Aladdin's of old, it is indeed a "wonderful lamp," for its marvelous light is purer and brighter than gas light, softer than electric light and more cheerful than either.

Look for this stamp—THE ROCHESTER. If the lamp dealer has not the genuine Rochester, and the state you want, send to us for our new illustrated catalog, and we will send you a lamp safely by express—your choice of over 2,000 varieties from the Largest Lamp Store in the World.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

You Should Ask God About Your Worldly Business.

The Right Thing at the Right Time and Go About It in the Right Way, and All Will Be Well.

Dr. Talmage's text last Sunday taken from John xlviii, 37: "To this end was I born."

After Plato had succeeded tradition says that his body was thrown into the Tiber, and such storms ensued on and about his body that his body immediately became and thrown into the Rhone, and similar disturbances swept that river and its banks. Then the body was taken out and removed to Lorraine and put in a deep pool, which immediately became the center of similar atmospheric and aqueous disturbances. Though these are fanciful and false traditions they show the exalted which which the world looked upon Plato. It was before this man, when he was in full life and power, that Christ was arraigned as in a Court of Oyer and Terminer.
Plato said to his prisoners: "Are you King of these?" The Jews answered:
"To this end was I born." Sure enough, although all earth and hell arose to keep him down, He is today emplaced, enthroned and crowned by every nation and King of Heaven. "To this end was I born." That is what he came for, and that was the time He accomplished.

By the time a child reaches ten years of age the parents begin to discover their child's destiny, but by the time he or she reaches fifteen years of age the question is on the child's lips: "What am I to be? What am I going to do?
What was I made for? It is a sensible and righteous question, and the youth ought to keep on asking it until it is so fully answered that the young man or young woman can say with as much confidence as the author of our text expansive smile: "To this end was I born."

There is too much divine skill shown in the physical, mental and moral construction of the ordinary human being to suppose that he was constructed without any divine purpose.

If you take me out on some vast plain and show me a pillar of temple, and what is called a dome like St. Peter, and having a floor of precious stones, and arches that must have taxed the brain of the greatest draughtsman to design, and walls sculptured and painted, and carved in the most exquisite manner, and I should ask you what this building was put up for, and you answered, "for nothing at all," how could I believe that it is important for me to believe that any ordinary human being who has in his muscular, nervous and cerebral organization more wonder-ments than Christopher Wren lifted in his hand, or Phidias carved in marble the Aeneas, or built in such a way that it should last after St. Paul Cathedral is as much a ruin as the Parthenon—that such a being was constructed for no purpose other than to do no mission, and without any divine intention toward some end. The object of this sermon is to help you to find out what you are made for, and to find in your own hearts and assist you into that condition where you can say with certainty and emphasis and enthusiasm and triumph: "To this end was I born."

First, I discharge you from all responsibility for most of your environments. You are not responsible for your parentage, or grandparentage.
You are not responsible for any of the cranks that may have lived in your ancestral line, and who a hundred years before you were born may have lived a style of life that more or less determined your life. You are not responsible for the fact that your temperament is sanguine, or melancholic, or bilious, or lymphatic, or nervous. Neither are you responsible for the position in which you are placed, whether the granite hills of New England or the cotton plantations of Louisiana, or on the banks of the Clyde, or the Danube, or the Shannon, or the Seine. Neither are you responsible for the religion taught in your father's house, or the irreligion. Do not bother yourself about what you can not help, or about circumstances that you did not create. Take this question that you shall be able safely to say:
"To this end was I born." How will you decide it? By direct application to God, and being as competent as you are competent to tell you—the Lord Almighty. Do you know the reason why He is the only one who can tell? Because He can see every thing before it is made, and He can see every thing your grave be eighty years off. And besides that, He is the only being who can see what has been happening for the last five hundred years in your ancestral line, and for thousands of years clear back to Adam, and there is not one person in that ancestral line of six thousand years but who somehow affected you, and that even old Adam himself will sometimes turn up in your disposition. The only being who can take all things that pertain to you into consideration is God, and He is the only being who can tell you what you can do to experiment with occupations and professions. The reason we have so many dead failures is that parents decide for their children, and their children, or children themselves, wrought on by some whim or fancy, decide for themselves without any im-poration of divine guidance. So we have now in our pulpits men making sermons who ought to be in blacksmith shops making plowshares, and we have in the law those who, instead of ruining the cases of their clients, ought to be pounding the scales of justice, and we are the worst hindrances to their patients' convalescence, and artists trying to paint landscapes who ought to be making the board fences. While there are others making bricks who ought to be remodeling constitutions, or showing planes who ought to be transforming literatures. Ask God about what your worldly business is, and undertake until you are so positive you can in earnestness smite your hand on your plow handle, or your carpenter's bench, or your blackstone's "Commentaries," or your medical dictionary, or your Dr. Dick's "Didactic Theology," saying: "For this end was I born." There are children who early develop natural affinities for certain styles of work.

When the father of the astronomer Forbes was going to London, he asked his children what present he should bring them. The boy who was to be an astronomer cried out: "Bring me a telescope!" And there are children whom you find all by themselves drawing on their slates, or on paper, ships or horses, or other things, and you know they are to be draughtsmen or artists of some kind. And you find others ciphering out difficult problems with ease and accuracy, and you know they are to be mathematicians. And others making strange and strange contrivances, and you know they are going to be machinists. And others are singing and dancing, and you know they will be farmers. And others are always swapping jack-knives or balls or bats and making something by the weight intended for a scholar. But in all most every day there comes a time when he does not know what he was made for, and his parents do not know, and it is a crisis that God only can decide. There are those born for some special work, and their fitness does not develop until quite late.

When Philip Doddridge, whose sermons and hymns are going to be mentioned soon for glory, began to study the ministry, Dr. Calvin, one of the wisest, and best men, advised him to turn his thoughts to some other work.
He said: "You are a clergyman, and you are a Christian scientist—his books, standard now, though he has been dead over 200 years—was the disappointment of his father, who used to say that if he might have taken any of his children away he hoped it might be his son Isaac. So some of those who have been characterized for their stupidity in boy-hood or girlhood, have turned out to be of the human race. These things being so, am I not right in saying that in many cases God only knows what his purpose is in sending you to do no mission, and without any divine
of this sermon is to help you to find
find in your own hearts and assist you
into that condition where you can say
with certainty and emphasis and en-
I born."

But my subject now mounts into the momentous. Let me say that you are not responsible for your parentage. I judge this from the way you are built.
You go into a shop where there is only one wheel turning and that by a workman's foot on a treadle, and you say to yourself: "There is something great being done, yet on a small scale!" But if you go into a factory covering many acres, and you find thousands of bands pulling on thousands of wheels, and shafts flying, and the whole scene bewildering activities, driven by water, or steam, or electric power, you conclude that the factory was put up to do great work, and you say to yourself:
"Look at you, and if I should find that you had only one faculty of the body, only one muscle, only one nerve, if you could see but could not hear, or could hear and not see, if you had the use of only one foot or one hand, and as to your higher nature, if you had only one mental faculty, and you had memory but no judgment, a right to but no will, and if you had a soul with only one capacity, I would say not much is expected of you. But stand up, oh man, and let me look you squarely in the face. Are you capable of hearing every thing? Ears capable of hearing every thing. Hands capable of grasping every thing. Mind with wheels that any factory ever turned, more powerful than the most powerful engine ever made. A soul that will outlive all the universe except Heaven, and would outlive all Heaven if the life of other immortals were a moment's shadow of the world eternal. What has the world right to expect of you? What has God a right to demand of you? God is the greatest of economists. He does not waste anything. He makes nothing in the universe, and He makes nothing for nothing. He makes nothing for nothing. He builds your body, mind and soul as they are built? There are only two things in the universe who can answer that question. One is God, and the other is you. You do not know. Your kindred can not certainly know. God knows, and you ought to know. A factory turning out of $200,000 worth a year, and turning out goods worth twenty cents a year would not be such an incongruity as you, oh man, with such semi-infants equipment doing nothing, or next to nothing, in the way of usefulness. "What shall I do?" you ask. My brethren, my sisters, do not ask me. Ask God. There's some path of Christianity, and there's some path that is a rough path, or it may be a smooth path, a long path, or a short path. It may be on a mount of conspiracy, or in a valley unobserved, but it is a path on which you can start with full faith and such satisfaction and such certainty that you can cry out in the face of earth and hell and Heaven: "To this end was I born."

Do not wait for extraordinary qualifications. Philip the Conqueror gained his greatest victories against a mule, and if you wait for some paragoned Bucephalus to ride into the conflict you will never get into the world-wide fight at all. Samson slew the Lord's enemies with the jawbone of the simplest beast created. Shagar slew six hundred of the Lord's enemies with an ox head. Under God, spittle cured the blind man of eyes in the New Testament story. Take all the help you have and say: "O Lord, here is what I have, show me the field and back me up by omnipotent power. Anywhere, anyhow, any time for God." "To this end was I born," you have said. And the Lord has said: "You back came to a trough to water the horses. While the horses were drinking, one of the men said to the other a few words about the value of the soul, and then they rode away, and in opposite directions. But the words uttered were the salvation of the one to whom they were uttered, and he became King of the world. One of the most distinguished missionaries in heaven lands, was John wondering who did for him the Christian kindness, and not finding out until in a bundle of books sent to Africa he found the biography of Brainerd Taylor and a picture of him, and the missionary recognized the face in that book as the man who, at the watering trough for horses, had said the words that saved his soul. What opportunities you have had in the past! What opportunities you have now! What opportunities you will have in the days to come! Put your hand on your forehead, this afternoon, and go in and comfort that young mother who lost her babe last summer.
Put on your hat, oh man, and go over and see that merchant who was employed yesterday to make an assignment, and tell him of the everlasting riches remaining for all those who serve the Lord. Can you sing? Go and sing for the man who can not get well, and you will help him into Heaven. Let it be your brain, your tongue, your eyes, your ears, your heart, your lungs, your hands, your feet, your body, but if it is your mind, in honoring the Lord, your death, your time, your eternity for God, feeling in your soul: "To this end was I born." It may be helpful to some if I record my own experience in this regard. I started for the law without asking any divine direction. I consulted my own tastes. I liked lawyers and court rooms and judges and juries, and I resolved to make a name for myself, and the Bradleys of the New Jersey bar, and as assistant of the county clerk, at 16 years of age, I searched the files, naturalized foreigners, recognized the confusion of judgments, swore witnesses and juries and grand juries. But after a while I felt a call to the Gospel ministry and entered it, and I felt some satisfaction in it.
But one summer, when I was resting at Sharon Springs, and while seated in the park of that momentous, I said to myself: "If I have an opportunity to do in the world, ought to find it out now," and with that determination I prayed: "If I had never before prayed, and got the divine direction, and were it down in my random books, and I were something great being done, yet on a small scale!" Oh, do not be satisfied with general directions. Get specific directions. Do not shoot at random, but aim at the Concentrate. Napoleon's success in battle came from his theory of breaking through the enemy's ranks at one point, not trying to meet the whole line of the enemy's force. Now a similar force. One reason why he lost Waterloo was because he did not work his usual theory, and spread his force out over a wider range. Oh Christian man, oh Christian woman, break through somewhere. Not a general engagement for God, but a particular engagement, and made in answer to prayer. If there are sixteen hundred million people in the world, there are sixteen hundred million different missions to fulfill, different styles of work to do, different ways in which you can do it, and you can get the divine direction there are at least five hundred and ninety-nine possibilities that you will make a mistake.
On your knees, get the divine direction settled so that you can firmly say:
"To this end was I born."

And now I come to the climacteric consideration. As you can tell your way for a happy eternity, in the disasters which have happened to your nature to be overcome by the blood of the Lamb if you will heartily accept that the increase in human life is all secured at the increase in human longevity. People live, as near as I can observe, about ten years longer than they used to. The modern doctors do not believe in life tablets on all occasions as did the former doctors. On those times if a man had fever, they bled him, if he had consumption they bled him, if he had the rheumatism they bled him, and if they could not make out exactly what was the matter they bled him. Olden time phlebotomy was death's confederate. All this has changed.

From the way I see people skipping about at 83 years of age I conclude that life insurance companies will have to change their table of rates and charge a man no more premium at 70 than they used to do at 60, or 50. It is premu-m at 50 than when he was 40. By the advancement of medical science and the wider acquaintance with the laws of health, and the fact that people now better how to take care of themselves, human life is prolonged. But do you realize what, after all, is the brevity of our earthly stay? In the times when people lived seven and eight hundred years, the patriarch Jacob said that his years were few. Looking at the life of the youngest person in this assembly and supposing he lived to be a nonagenarian, how short the time and soon gone, while banded up in front of us is an eternity so vast that arithmetic has no figures enough to express its length or breadth, or depth or height. For a happy eternity you were born unless you run yourself against the divine intentions. If standing in your presence, my eye should fall upon the footstool just here as the soul will appear when the world lets it up, and Heaven entrances it, I suppose I would be so overpowered that I should drop down as one dead. You were created under the hand of God, and explored the human records, and you have daguerreotypes of some of the kindred of previous generations, you have had photographs of some of what you were in boy-hood or girlhood, and what you were ten years later, and it is very interesting to anyone to be able to look back upon pictures of what he was ten, or twenty, or thirty years ago, but have you ever had a picture taken of what you may be and what you will be if you seek after God and feel the Spirit's renewing power? Where shall I plant the camera to take the picture?
I plant it on this platform. I direct it toward you. Sit still or stand still while I take the picture. It shall be an instantaneous picture. There! I have it. It is done. You can see the picture in its imperfect state, and get some idea of what it will be when thoroughly developed. There is your resurrected body, so brilliant that the noonday sun is a patch of midnight compared with it.
There is your soul, so pure that all the forces of diabolism could not spot it with an impurity. There is your being, so mighty and so swift that light from Heaven to Mercury or Mars or Jupiter and back again to Heaven would not weary you, and a world on each shoulder would not crush you. An eye that shall never shed a tear. An energy that shall never feel a fatigue, a brow that shall never throb with pain. You are young again, though you died of decrep-itude. You are well again, though you coughed or shivered yourself into the tomb. Your everyday associates are the apostles and prophets and martyrs and men of heroic deeds, masculine and feminine, of all the centuries. The archangel to you no embarrassment, God Himself your present and everlasting joy. That is an instantaneous picture of what you may be, and what I am sure some of you will be. If you realize that it is an imperfect picture, my apology is what the Apostle John said: "It doth not yet appear what we shall be." "To this end was I born." If I did not think so I would be overwhelmed with melancholy.

Neighborhood Guilds.
A contemporary summarizes the interesting account of "Neighborhood Guilds" given by Dr. Stanton Colt, the young American who has been going to London, like the experiment which he had already carried out in the heart of New York poverty. A neighborhood guild consists of a number of people who live in the same block.
Dr. Colt's field is divided into five clubs —two for young boys and girls, two for youths and maidens and one for adults. Each guild has a leader who is small enough for the leader to know each member personally —the vice of excessive size being one which Dr. Colt condemns. Several guilds may federate, and the force of the guild is that of reproducing the family as the best type of corporate life. Above all, everything is built on a democratic basis, and each guild is self-governing.
The chief idea of each guild-worked that there is to be no condescension, no "going down" to the poor. The success of the various experiments in guilds shows that this form of charity meets certain needs of the age, and undoubtedly leads to an extension of social sympathy, and to a better understanding between the rich and the poor.

—Editor (wildly)—I am ruined—totally ruined. Foreman: What's the matter now? Editor: That's the matter.
Why, in my notice of Col. Jones' marriage I plainly wrote: "The ready and waiting bride advanced to the altar, and with him she was married," and confound you here's the way it reads in the paper: "The wretched and weary bride danced to the altar, hung with liars and horse thieves." Go off in the mud and hell, you confound! I don't want to waste buckshot on you.—Atlanta Constitution.

—The chief secret of personal comfort lies in not suffering trifles to vex us, and in cultivating our undergrowth of small pleasures.

—The girl some years at boarding-school often wishes that she is married that she had gone to housekeeping school.

—Every individual who has work to do is this world, the more it needs a reason.—Dr. Helms.

HAZEL GREEN, KY.:
FRIDAY, - Nov. 6, 1891.

Hon. Henry Watterson, of the Courier-Journal, lectured at Bowling Green Friday night, his subject being "Money and Morals."

The geophant who stoops to secure your support only to stab you when a dark corner chance comes is a scoundrel of more than 22-calibre short.

Ever since Minister Patrick Egan arrived in Valparaiso the Chilians have been raising hell, and the United States should inform the minister that Egan come home.

The primary election for candidates for city offices at Lexington Saturday resulted in the nomination of J. Hall Davidson for mayor, J. R. Jewell for recorder, and S. G. Sharp for collector.

Larkin Nix was hanged by a mob at Meigs Station, Ga., Saturday night. He had a month before murdered a man by the name of Mrs. because the latter objected to his attention to his daughter, Nix being a married man.

Ex-Governor David Meriwether, of Louisville, on Friday celebrated his ninety-second birthday. He still enjoys good health and is as active as a majority of men at half the age. The Meriwether of this glorious climate of Kentucky may lengthen the old governor's years to a centenarian.

Kentucky is ahead again. J. Talbot Jackson, of Central University, Richmond, Ky., on Friday won the interstate medal in the oratorical contest at Charleston, S. C. The contending representatives were from South Carolina, North Carolina, Virginia, Georgia and Tennessee. "Bah for Kentucky!"

The turnkey of the Louisville jail on Sunday evening last frustrated the flight of twenty-three moonshiners confined in cell 9, by discovering evidences that led to an investigation. They had picked a hole in the wall and only awaited the darkness of night to remove the last layer of brick between them and liberty. They are now more securely confined.

Forest fires in the counties of Trimble and Bullitt, respectively, last week resulted in great damage to property. One or two farm houses and barns were burned in Trimble, and much property of a similar character was destroyed in Bullitt. In the latter county the fire had reached the fruit section, and the fear was that the orchards, already greatly damaged, would be entirely destroyed.

Three thousand free miners surrounded the stockades at Briceville, and Coal Creek, Tenn., and released 300 convicts, giving them citizens clothes to facilitate their escape. Gov. Buchanan has offered a reward of $5,000 for the leader of the miners, $250 apiece for the other men engaged in releasing the convicts, and $25 each for the return of the convicts. The majority of the convicts started for Kentucky when turned loose.

At this writing it is impossible to tell who has been elected in Ohio, but if the factions in the Republican ranks should have drawn anything from McKinley, as the friends of Campbell hoped, there is a bare possibility that the latter gentleman has been elected. At any rate the election of Campbell is a consummation devoutly wished by Democrats everywhere. In New York the election of Flower over Fassett is conceded, and the Democratic majority may reach 20,000. We will give the result next week.

A Building and Loan Association is a blessing to any community so fortunate as to have one, and we rejoice that Hazel Green now has one. Those who desire to build homes for their families find in these associations a lender who receives payment in small monthly installments, while the principal and interest are both being decreased by the participation which the borrowers have in the earnings and profits of the Association. All of our citizens who desire to make safe investments should call upon Wm. H. Cord, Secretary and Treasurer, who will take pleasure in explaining the plan to any one who may desire to invest. See him at once.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30, 1891.

President Harrison expressed himself to a personal friend as feeling greatly relieved to turn over the foreign business of the government to Secretary Blaine again. This is doubtless true, but if one may judge from the expressions of opinion from persons of all shades of political belief, demands of this government upon that of Chili regarding the robbing of United States sailors, which was made public this week, and which although signed by Assistant Secretary of State Wharton, was written by Mr. Harrison, demonstrates that Mr. Harrison is an adept in the preparation of State papers. It would be difficult for any one to put that dispatch in more appropriate language, and fortunately upon such questions as this all patriotic Americans, without regard to their political affiliations, occupy precisely the same position.

Secretary Blaine had a talk with Senator Montt, who has been appointed Chilean minister to the United States, this week, but as the new minister's credentials have not arrived the talk was entirely informal. Senator Montt expresses the greatest friendship for the United States, but he has a friend and associate who lives at the Chilean legation in this city, that loses no opportunity to express the contempt which he says the Chileans feel for this government and its people. At one time this fellow, whose name is Foster, claimed to be secretary of the legation, but now he says he has no official connection therewith. It might be said of Foster, as Commodore Vanderbilt said of one of his sons-in-law—"He is more kinds of a blank fool than any man I ever saw."

Criticism of public men without just cause never helps anybody or anything. The best friends of temperance regard that an attack, in the name of temperance, has been made upon President Harrison, not for anything that he has done or left undone, but because Mr. Andrew Carnegie, the Scotch-American millionaire, has announced that he had sent a barrel of Scotch whisky to the White House as a present to Mr. Harrison. It by no means follows that Mr. Harrison will drink this whisky because it was given to him, indeed he would have to have an ostrich stomach if he drank all the liquids sent by cranks and friends to the White House. Few Presidents have occupied the White House whose personal habits were more temperate than those of Mr. Harrison, and no President has been a more sincere friend to those engaged in temperance work, therefore it is hard to understand why he should be subjected to harsh criticism for something that he had nothing whatever to do with.

On November 11 the National Council of Administration of the G. A. R. will meet in this city for the purpose of deciding upon the date for holding the National encampment next year, and also for the examination of documentary evidence showing that the Washington executive committee has secured the required concessions from hotel keepers and railroads and complied with other stipulated requirements. All these things and more have been done. Every hotel keeper in Washington has bound himself in writing not to add one cent to his regular charges during the encampment.

A number of officials went over to Baltimore Wednesday afternoon to witness the launching of the steel cruiser Detroit, which was a success. It is thought that it's twin vessel to the Detroit, which is also to be built at Baltimore, will be christened Mobile.

A naval court of inquiry is investigating the recent wrecking of the U. S. S. Dispatch. It seems that the accident was caused by the executive officer changing the sailing orders of the commander, owing to his mistaking one light for another, at least that's the way the testimony so far taken makes it look.

"This is no political headquarters," said an official at the Farmers Alliance headquarters when asked for political news from Ohio. "Whatever action individual members of the organization may take the National Alliance has not yet gone into politics."

Hon. Jerry Simpson, who passed thru Washington this week, says the Alliance Representatives will have their own candidate for Speaker and will not go into the caucus of either of the old parties.

LAST CALL.—Your taxes for the three years past, and long since due, must now be paid or I will know the reason why. I have indulged you as long as it is possible for me to do so, and I hope you will sufficiently appreciate that fact to come up and settle at once. Respectfully, C. C. HANKS, S. W. C.

Do You Need Money?

If so, you can get something better than dollars from us. The completion of the K. U. R. to Jackson has cut us off from a large wholesale trade heretofore had by us in several counties east, and left on our hands an immense stock of goods, which we are compelled to unload, and in order to do so we are determined to make prices do the work, prices which will make our patrons happy and make competition howl. We offer to Country Merchants extra inducements, and guarantee to them lower prices than they ever got before. We are overstocked and must unload. Remember we will duplicate any bill, with freights added, either wholesale or retail, east or west, north or south, up hill or down. We are now receiving such lines, bought for cash at bottom bargains, as will fill every department. New, fresh, seasonable, choice and cheap. We can astonish you with John Day leaves this week for Wisconsin for a hunting trip. If we are rightly informed, the bears in that country are always at home and ready to receive calls, especially if the callers are juicy and tender. ### Bro. Michel Increases His Flock.

The Presbyterian parsonage at this place was stormed last Monday night by a stranger who was so helpless that the kind pastor and wife could not refuse to give him admission to their hospitable home. The whole family at once fell in love with him and gave him every attention that his needy condition required. A large number of persons have called to see him and each one comes away with a great deal to say about the new comer. He is improving rapidly under the kind treatment he receives, and is so anxious to do something for a livelihood that they have set him up in the dairy business and he has gone to work in hard earnest. He promises to be an industrious and useful citizen. The Hustler extends to him a hearty welcome, and would suggest to him that if he expects to make life a success he must advertise.—Jackson Hustler.

A Difficulty in Morgan County.

A difficulty occurred on Little Caney, in Morgan county, last Saturday in which nine shots were exchanged. Uriah and Joe Elam were engaged on one side, and Beverly and Frank Lewis on the other. Joe Elam owned a piece of land through which the Lewis boys had to pass to the road, and Elam refusing to let them go through they undertook to force their way, with the result that Beverly Lewis received a severe wound from a hatchet in the hands of Uriah Elam. One man had all of his vest and shirt torn away and his abdomen grazed by the contents of a double-barrel shot gun. Coon Stamp endeavored to act as peacemaker and held the muzzle of a shot gun in either hand while he stood between two of the belligerents. Warrants were Saturday issued for all the parties.

Letter From Indian Territory.

ARMORE, I. T., Oct. 23, 1891.

EDITOR HERALD—You will find enclosed one dollar for your valuable paper, a copy of which came to hand yesterday. Saw so many familiar names in the list, it made me feel a little homesick; proud to hear "Supple Jack" recommending the old State so highly, but doubtless he never has visited the Lone Star State. I am partial towards the old State myself, and if I were to say that I would betray my judgment. Guess Mr. Supple Jack is in bad health.

With many thanks, as ever, CATHARINE HENRY.

One Dollar Echo to Two.

In these days of hard times the man is indeed lucky who can make one dollar go as far as two. But every man in this section can do that if he will. Louis & Gus Straus, leading clothiers of Lexington, Ky., are now in receipt of a large stock of goods which they are selling at fifty cents on the dollar. Any man who needs an overcoat or a suit can save the expense of trip and money besides by visiting them, opposite Phoenix, Lexington, Ky.

Joined the Benedicts.

The many friends of Green Strother in this section will heartily congratulate him on his marriage. The Sentinel-Democrat, of last week, says: "Green Strother, of this city, and Miss Tillie Sturgeon, of Denton, Ky., were married in Lexington on Thursday of last week. They are now located in this city. Our congratulations are freely extended."

He Has Changed His Mind.

Owing to the urgent persuasion of my many friends I have decided to remain and serve them until spring, and am now ready to attend, day or night, those who have settled with me. Those who have not settled are requested to call at once, as I am bound to have money or a settlement some way. Respectfully, J. Harlan Stamper, who is in the mercantile business at Torrent, Ky., visited his family at this place Saturday and Sunday.

Milton V. Potts moved to Hazel Green last Friday. We regret very much to give him up, but Hazel Green gains a good citizen while Campton loses one.

S. S. Combs, the gentlemanly proprietor of the Combs House, returned Saturday from Cincinnati and other points, where he bought a full supply of dry goods, etc.

Misses Maggie and Alice Smith, daughters of our countryman Capt. S. B. Smith, and two of Wolfe county's most charming beauties, paid our town a flying visit Friday, Oct. 30.

Mrs. Sarah Jane Drake, wife of our fellow townsman John E. Drake, died Thursday morning of dropsy. She was a member of the Christian church and met the grim monster with joy, which faith in the Lord Jesus Christ only can give. She was loved by all who knew her, and the world is better by her having lived in it. The night was never too dark, nor the chilly blasts of winter never too cold to prevent her from visiting the sick and the dying and administering to their wants. We are confident that she is singing with the angels, on the elysian fields of heaven, where fragrant flowers bloom forever, and basking in the golden sunshine of the countenance of Him who died on Calvary's rugged brow. Let us emulate her example and meet her on the glittering streets of pure gold, where parting will be no more. Her body was laid to rest in the Evans graveyard, one mile from town, to await the resurrection morn. Her funeral was preached at the graveyard by Rev. F. A. Savage.

MORGAN COUNTY.

Maytown Missiles.

Last week was a dry and hot time in the history of our town, especially about grub time. A defect in the boiler of W. W. Manker's mill was the cause, but thanks to the energy of W. W. M. and the boss machinist Mr. Curtin, of Lexington, the mills are all O. K. and doing better work than ever.

Some of THE HERALD subscribers at this place want to know what has become of THE HERALD correspondents. We can only answer for one, and that was we were waiting for some new subscribers that we might have something to write about.

Mrs. R. A. Sample has had a very severe attack of pneumonia since returning from Virginia, but thanks to a kind Providence she is around again. The protracted meeting that commenced here on the 20th of October is still going on. We trust that great good has and will be done.

C. C. Pieratt, Miss Lulia Jones and Miss Lowens Ingram are all very low with fever.

J. B. Cecil, wife and little daughter are visiting in town.

A Fearful Ride.

WAS the only passenger on the freight train. I was on my way from Trinidad, Colo., to Raton, which lies just across the Raton mountains, a distance of twenty-eight miles. On leaving Trinidad we struck a steep grade, which extended for ten miles.

"This is a pretty high grade," I remarked to the conductor, who was a pleasant appearing young man of some twenty-three years of age.

"Yes," he replied, "and it is one of the longest on the line. It is to this grade that I owe my present position on the road."

"Tell me about it," I cried, eagerly.

"Was there an accident?"

"Well, not much of an accident, but there might have been had good luck not favored me."

"It was five years ago. I had come from the east to seek my fortune in Colorado. After spending nearly two years in prospecting in different parts of the state, I resolved to go to Los Vegas, New Mexico, and try to get a position on the railroad, as I always had a liking for that sort of work."

"Well, I only got as far as Trinidad, when I found myself without a dollar in the world, and of course I had to stop over and see if I could not get something to do."

"I went to the Santa Fe rail road station and applied for work, but failed to get any encouragement. Then I went to the different trainmen and made diligent inquiries, but none of them knew of any job that was open."

"A conductor, who was then running local freight on this line, promised to me a position as brakeman if I would remain in Trinidad two weeks."

"His head brakeman was going to quit then, he informed me, and I could have his place if I chose to remain there till the vacancy occurred; but two days later he was removed to another division of the road, and I was left without any prospect of employment in Trinidad."

"I then resolved to go to Los Vegas at once, but, having no money to pay my fare, I was at a loss to know what to do."

"At last, however, I decided to go to the railroad station and endeavor to get some of the brakemen on the freights to let me ride."

"When I arrived at the station, I found that a long freight train had just pulled up and was standing on the side track to wait the coming of the eastern bound express."

"I first approached the conductor, explaining my condition, asked him to carry me over his division, but he dismissed me with the curt reply that his train was a freight train and he was forbidden to carry passengers."

"GOT ANY MONEY?"

"Discouraged but not despairing, I went to the head brakeman and sought to induce him to allow me to ride on one of the box cars."

"Got any money?" he asked.

"No, a cent," I replied, "but—"

"You'll have to walk then," he said, and passed on.

"I tried the other brakemen with like result; then I began to feel pretty blue. I walked up the track along the side of the train, wishing that I had never seen the state of Colorado."

"Presently I stopped to admire a new locomotive that was in the train near its center. It was a beautiful piece of workmanship, fresh from the shops, and was being taken south for the Mexican Central."

"While I was standing there the train was uncoupled just back of the locomotive, and the lower section backed down to another switch."

"A few minutes later the express went by, and then the section that had been run back was brought on to the main track and went thundering on its way to Raton."

"You see the trains had to be pulled up this long grade in sections then, and an engine was kept at the point to do the work."

"As soon as the train had disappeared up the slope, I heard the bell ring, and then the other section began to move forward. Not until that moment, when the disagreeable sensation of being left behind took possession of me, did I have the remotest idea of attempting to steal a ride. Then it occurred to me that I might easily ride on the engine at the rear end of the train, and no one be the wiser; but I hesitated to do such a thing, and should have given up the idea had not the brakeman pointed to the engine and hinted that if I didn't have backbone enough to get aboard and ride, I ought to walk."

"Thus encouraged, I ran forward and leaped aboard the moving engine. Then I crept into the tender and seated myself where I would be hid from the observation of anyone who might pass along the train. I knew that the brakeman would shingle if he could, but must not allow the conductor to discover my presence."

"The train was now moving faster and faster, and the clatter of wheels under a jointed rail told me that we were passing over the switch and on to the main track."

"We soon struck the long, steep grade, and moved very slowly. There is a level space a quarter of a mile long, perhaps, just below the last grade of two miles. We had reached this, and were starting up the last grade, when the engine stalled."

"I heard the loud rapid pulling of the locomotive as the wheels slipped on the track, and then the train gradually came to a standstill. Then we began to move backward, and I knew we were backing on to the level space to get a new start."

"The train moved pretty fast down the grade, and I rightly guessed that the engine was out of trouble."

"We had crossed the level space and reached the down grade below it, when we were brought almost to a standstill. The engine gave a loud snort, then there came a rattling of ears as it began to start forward again. Then I felt a violent jerk, I heard something break, and the engine on which I was riding stopped, while the train moved on all four miles ahead. I could now see the city of Trinidad. I knew that it would be impossible for me to stop the engine before I reached that place, but I still hoped to check its speed sufficiently to keep it from flying the track."

"This was my only hope. I could see long lines of cars on the side tracks and a number of engines switching about the yards. The station itself shuddered as I thought of what would happen should the main track not be clear when I reached the place."

"Only a few seconds now and I would be safely in the station, and I again set the brakes a notch tighter, and then, grasping the bell cord, I rang the bell furiously."

"The engine seemed to be fairly lifted from the track as it swung round a curve and vent thundering on its way. I cast a fleeting glance at the station close ahead. I only saw a confused mass of buildings and cars; then I dashed by like a meteor."

"Then, as I gained a level stretch of track the engine began to slacken its speed, and presently came to a standstill nearly a mile below the station."

"I was saved! A mist gathered before my eyes, and I sank down unconscious in the bottom of the cab."

"When I regained my senses I found quite a crowd of people gathered about me, among whom was the conductor, who had returned with his train for the missing engine. When he asked me how I had come to be on the engine, I told him that I was a stranger here to Los Vegas, but did not mention the part the brakeman had played in the matter."

"My surprise, he did not seem displaced by my attempt to steal a ride, but complimented me on my nerve in staying with the engine at the risk of my life, and putting on the brakes as I did. I had saved the company the loss of several thousand dollars, he explained, for which he himself might have been blamed."

"You give me more credit than I deserve," I replied, and then I explained how I had been shut up in the firebox till it was too late to leave the engine."

"He cast a surprised glance at me, and then said:

"Well, you certainly possess firmness and truthfulness, which is, after all, more to your credit than the performance of a brave deed would have been. Come with me to Los Vegas, and I'll see what I can do for you."

hour. The high cliffs and patches of cedars that skirted the road stared at us in a mingled streak of gray and green."

"Far down the track ahead I saw a gang of section men at work. The next instant the engine, which seemed to have leaped the intervening space, shot by them like a flash. I only caught a brief glance of their astonished faces as they hurried back from the track; then they faded from view far behind."

"I glanced hurriedly about me, my eyes falling on the polished levers, useless without steam. Then I caught sight of the brake on the tender, and leaping forward, I grasped the lever and gave it a vigorous turn."

"There was a sharp, hissing sound as the iron brakes came in contact with the swiftly rolling wheels, and sparks of fire shot from each side of the tender, but there was no visible slackening of the speed of the engine."

"Sling all the force I could command, I set the brakes, and then stood helplessly there in the tender while I was swiftly whirled down the mountain road."

HONEST MONEY.

A Striking Contrast Between Democracy

Two political conventions, one republican and one democratic, met the other day in two states—the former in Massachusetts, the latter in New York. Both were in favor of honest money and the principles of their respective parties in regard to the currency. It is profoundly significant that these two declarations were, in almost identical language, in favor of honest money and against every form of depreciation. It is still more significant that the language in which the republicans of Massachusetts and the democrats of New York declaration was substantially the language of the president of the United States upon the same subject. The most obvious effect of this striking agreement between the two great parties is that it is sure far as anything in politics can be sure—to take the question of the currency out of the field of political struggle in the national elections of next year. Since both republicans and democrats have resolved that every dollar issued by the government shall be as good as every other dollar, there is nothing in the direction of future currency legislation for either party to dispute or adopt.

The position of the republicans in every state in the east where they still have any leaders of probity and common sense was already fixed for them. They were bound by honor to adopt firmness, and with admirable precision and completeness of statement, had laid down the doctrine which they were bound by every consideration of party expediency to adopt. Anything different, and certainly anything less, would have been on the one hand an open or covert declaration of the policy of the party to adopt, and on the other hand would have given the party in the delirious and grave words of Mr. Harrison at Albany were the official leader of the republicans in the state, the most serious and senseless utterances of the republicans in Ohio and Pennsylvania. Until they were spoken no one could say what would be the course of the party in this regard. But now it is found saying that the next congress would pass a free-coinage bill, and President Harrison would sign it. But even Mr. Harrison had once declared that he would have fought as hard for the party and in the government that "every dollar issued by the government, whether paper or coin, should be as good as every other dollar," the policy of his party was irrevocably settled.

Very different was the situation of the democrats of New York. The great hope of the representatives of that party in the last congress, and most of its senators, had voted for a free coinage bill. The democratic convention of Ohio and that of Kentucky had declared in favor of free coinage. These republicans were sound evidence of a strong sentiment in the party. Against them were to be set the firm and simple declaration of the late democratic president, Mr. Cleveland, and the known sentiment of the business men of the state of New York. It is not surprising that a policy of evasion and compromise should have suggested itself to them. It should have fostered an attitude in such a leader as Gov. Hill. It is to the credit of the sagacity of the leaders of the New York democracy that they have not followed the lead of the party at once the duty of the party to adopt a policy absolutely beyond misinterpretation. Referring to the past, they say: "We now, as then, steadfastly adhere to principles of sound finance. We are against the issuance of any dollar which is not of the intrinsic value of every other dollar of the United States. And, as if they were not satisfied that there should be no chance for any such trickery on the part of the Fifty-first congress, they proceeded to denounce the Sherman silver law, "under which one-tenth of our gold is being melted down and our silver paper output is dammed up at home."

It is impossible to exaggerate the effect of this declaration. It banishes the free coinage issue, not only from the campaign of this year, but practically from the presidential campaign of next year. It leaves the field clear for an honest fight on the question of tariff reform and removes the most serious obstacle to the triumph of that reform. And, above all, it gives assurance to the business men and the workmen of the country that the harvest of prosperity now apparently awaiting them shall not be blighted by financial folly.—N. Y. Times.

TO OUTJINGO JIM.

Mr. Harrison's Scheme to Head on the Man from Maine.

A Washington correspondent reports a republican politician who took a prominent part in the last campaign as saying that before the next presidential fight it will be necessary to outjingo the people in a more "sensational" issue than that of the tariff if the republicans are to go into the contest with any hope of winning. According to this politician the protection cannot be relied on to hold the republican voters, since it has been practically abandoned by one of their most popular leaders.

The new and sensational issue, according to this party scheme, is to be annexation—Canada, Mexico, no matter what, so that the prize looks large. He intimates that the next step is the purchase of St. Thomas, an annexation treaty with the Hawaiian islands, and the like, has been instigated from the state department by way of feeling of public opinion and getting things ready for the sudden springing of the sensational issue before snow flies.

And according to the same authority Blaine is not "in it." The president is in an awkward position, owing to Blaine's absence, and is getting ready to spring this issue as one of his own invention, and a great deal bigger and better one than Mr. Blaine's little reciprocity issue. In short, the story is that Mr. Harrison means to outjingo Jim and beat the great sensational republican statesman at his own game of sensationalism.

It is an interesting story as it stands, but it is hardly to be accepted without some grains of salt. Mr. Harrison is not generally supposed to be the kind of man to play such risky political games or to play the guessing game with an adept as the Maine statesman in the practice of the art sensationalism. Besides, the assumption upon which the whole story rests is that in going into the small business of reciprocity with the poorest customers Mr. Blaine has abandoned protection as an issue. He has done nothing of the kind, as he has said himself. He has only proposed to enlarge the tariff, and to make the American tariff beneficiary can collect his toll. That is all. No doubt many of the McKinley politicians would be glad to get Mr. Blaine out of the way, but still more would be glad to see him with some bogus sensational issue next year, and prevent them if possible from having a chance to express their opinion squarely on the McKinley system of spoils politics. These politicians would be glad enough to make the president a party to this little game, and they are no doubt playing on his ambition that end. But if Mr. Harrison has the boldness to risk the result of the hand he has been greatly misjudged by his countrymen.—Chicago Herald.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

—The ridiculous republican yarn that the English Golden Club had collected a fund of a million to defeat McKinley in Ohio is authoritatively denied. It deceived very few people.—Boston Globe.

—The Harrison administration has thus far paid out $18,000,000 more over due funds. It has accepted and received further than $25,000,000, and it is still trying to get further time on the $10,000,000 overdue and not yet arranged for.—St. Louis Republic.

—Those ingenious persons who imagine that Mr. Quay has been deposited are invited to consult the figures of the balloting for a president at the convention of republican clubs held in Scranton. The vote was: Quay, 141; other fellow, 42.—N. Y. Commercial-Advertiser.

—McKinley's "American tin-plate industry" in Ohio is likely to die election day. A Washington correspondent has investigated the Piqua deception, by which a little mill, a little melting pot and one hundred pounds of tin are made to serve as a great enterprise called into being by the late-benefited McKinley bill.—Boston Globe.

—The republican candidate for governor of New York insists that state issues should subordinate national issues in the campaign. The republican candidate for governor of Massachusetts insists that national issues should subordinate state issues there. Republican policy seems to be a matter of geography.—Brooklyn Eagle.

—"Star Route" Dorsey has joined Steve Elkins in prophesying that Blaine will be the next nominee of his party. There seems to be a little doubt that a stray vote taken and the men who at different times have too tottered upon the narrow line that divides republican politics from the penitentiary would give the author, The Mulligan legacy a decisive majority.—Chicago Times.

—The Boston Home Market club has sent fifty thousand documents into Ohio to help McKinley. One of the documents has for its title "Wage Earners and How They Are Affected by the Tariff." If there is anything which can give comfort to a McKinley politician in a document having such a name it must have been written by some subsidized dreamer who has not read the daily papers for the last six months.—N. Y. Times.

AN EXCITING CHASE.

The Arrest of a Fugitive by Laurel County's Sheriff.

The little town of London, Ky., had quite a sensation one day last week. A fugitive from Perry county entered the First National Bank and presented two forged checks for payment, one for $350 and the other for $570, both signed A. L. Lewis, one payable to J. C. Rogers, a merchant of Hyden, and the other to John Bowlin, whom the fugitive impersonated. Cashier Ford at once recognized the forgery, and, politely asking the man to be seated a few minutes, sent a boy for Sheriff Moren. The man, whose name is ascertained to be Joe Minard, became nervous and demanded his checks or the money thereon. On receiving neither he left the bank in anger. So when the Sheriff came in Mr. Ford went out on the street with him, where they were not long in finding the would-be swindler. He was arrested on the spot, and on the way to the jail he asked permission to give bail.

The Sheriff undertook to assist Minard, but, on reaching the depot, Minard stepped behind the Sheriff and struck him a severe blow in the back of the head, felling him to the ground and cutting an ugly and painful gash. The culprit at once took to his heels, and came near escaping. Town Marshal Harben, who was near by, seized the Sheriff's pistol and pursued the fugitive coming on in the rear after recovering from the shock. Harben opened and continued firing until he arrested the man, in the edge of the woods, near the Riley House. He was materially assisted by Col. Colbert, who slipped out the back way from the hotel and came upon the fugitive unexpectedly, and he was so near that he turned and surrendered at once. Minard admits his guilt.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. ## HE WILL HANG.

Simpson Bush to be Executed at Stanton in December.

Simpson Bush, confined in the Stanton jail and sentenced to hang for the murder of his wife in Clay City, was considerably affected last week when informed that the decision in his case had been affirmed by the Court of Appeals. He remarked that he is innocent of the charge, and is as well prepared for death as he ever will be, and he said he would not confess that he did the murder in order to get his sentence commuted to life imprisonment, and that he would not confess to a thing that he did not do. Bush, according to the sentence pronounced at the last term of the Powell Circuit court, by Judge Riddell, will be hanged at a point near the jail in Stanton on December 14 next. Bush claims that either his wife or one of the other occupants in their room did the shooting. Should Bush hang it will be the first legal hanging ever done in Powell county.

We want every mother to know that croup can be prevented. True croup never appears without a warning. The first symptom is hoarseness, then the child appears to have a cold, or a cold may have accompanied the hoarseness from the start. After that a peculiar rough cough is developed, which is followed by the croup. The time to act is when the child first becomes hoarse, a few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy would prevent the attack. Even after the rough cough has appeared, the disease may be prevented by using this remedy as directed. The only safe way is to keep a 50 cent bottle of the Remedy in the house for use whenever the symptoms of the disease appear. For sale by Rose & Swango.

GAME OLD PALO ALTO.

The Hero of the Stanford Stables Lowers His Record—Col. October 27. Palo Alto, the old hero of the Stanford stables, beat his record, trotting a mile in 2:10 flat. He made the quarters in :32, :32, :33 and :33. It was a game race against time from start to finish, and the old campaigner did not make a skip in the entire mile.

When he went to the quarter in 32 seconds, horsemen said the pace was too fast, and when he reached the half in 1:03 they said he could not keep his feet. But Palo Alto was out to beat all his efforts, and went at this surprising gait throughout the mile without even a touch of Marvin's whip. Expert horsemen contend that Palo Alto will beat the world's stallion record of 2:09, held by Allerton. They expect to send him again in a few days on this track if the weather holds good.

Milton Gilliland was arrested Wednesday week by Deputy Sheriff Hanford and taken to Somerset, Ky., and in default of bail was lodged in jail.
